CONTINUATION OF LATE FOREIGN NEWS,
(VIA NEW-YORK.)

LONDON, Feb. 22.

Despatches were yesterday received at the foreign office from his majesty's envoy at Constantinople. The vessel which brought these despatches touched on her passage at Gibraltar, from which place she has brought an account of the important Spanish post of Ceuta having, with the consent of the Spaniards, been taken possession of by two British battalions from Gibraltar. Ceuta has a good harbor, and is situated exactly opposite Gibraltar, from whence it is only five leagues distant. The French, it was pretty well ascertained, meant to attempt a coup de main against it, and it was even supposed that the Toulon fleet was destined for that service. Their object, however, is most happily frustrated, and Ceuta being in our possession, we have now the full command of both sides of the Straights, and of course of the ingress and egress of the Mediterranean—a consideration of the highest importance in the present critical situation of affairs.

Feb. 26.

The Gazette of Saturday contains a notification from Marquis Wellesley, that all the ports and coast of Spain, from Ojón to the French territory, is declared in a state of strict blockade.

By a new decree, the duties on all colonial produce, whether introduced by capture or otherwise, into Holland, are doubled.

MINISTRY FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

Note from the minister of foreign affairs to the Baron de Roell, minister of foreign affairs for Holland.

The undersigned minister of foreign relations for France is charged with making known to his excellency Baron de Roell, the Dutch minister of foreign affairs, the resolutions which his imperial majesty has been forced to come to in consequence of the actual situation of Europe. If these determinations are contrary to the views of the people of Holland, the emperor is certainly sorry for it, and has adopted this course with great regret. But the unrelenting destiny which presides over the affairs of this world, and which chooses that men should be governed by events, obliges his majesty to follow up with firmness those measures of which the necessity has been demonstrated to him, without suffering himself to be turned aside by secondary considerations.

His imperial majesty, in placing one of his brothers on the throne of Holland, did not foresee that England would dare to proclaim openly the principle of perpetual war; and that to support it she would adopt, as the basis of her legislation, the monstrous principles which have dictated her Orders of Council of November, 1807. Until then her maritime right was undoubtedly recognized by France, and repelled by neutrals; but it did not exclude all navigation, and left a sort of independence to maritime nations. There was but little inconvenience to the common cause in the commerce kept up by Holland with England; either through the agency of neutrals, or by borrowing their flag. Marseilles, Bordeaux, and Antwerp, enjoyed the same advantage. England had still to manage the Americans, the Russians, the Prussians, the Swedes, and the Danes, and these nations formed a sort of league between the powers whom the seas separated.

The fourth Coalition destroyed in this state of things; England succeeded in uniting against France, Russia, Prussia, and Sweden; she was no longer obliged to resort to such management; it was then that she showed both words and things; she set up the pretensions of making disappear all the rights of neutrals before a simple decree of blockade. The Emperor was forced to use reprisals, and at his entrance into Berlin he answered it by the blockade of the British Isles. Neutrals, and above all Americans, demanded an explanation of this measure. He answered them, that although the absurd system of blockade was a state altogether intolerable, still the Emperor bounded himself to the stopping on the continent the commerce of the English; that the neutral flag should be respected at sea; that his vessels of war and privateers should not disturb the navigation of neutrals, the decree being only to be executed upon land.

But this measure itself, which compelled the shutting of the ports of Holland against the English, injured the mercantile interests of the people of Holland, and was contrary to their ancient habits. This was the first source of the opposition which began to prevail between France and Holland. From that time his imperial majesty could not but observe that the king of Holland was divided between his most imprescriptible duties—his duties to the imperial throne and the mercantile notions of the Dutch nation. Nevertheless his imperial majesty armed himself with patience, and shut his eyes, in expectation from the turn of events of some incident which should deliver his brother from the very unpleasant alternative to which he found himself reduced.

During these transactions the peace of Tilsit was concluded. The emperor of Russia, provoked by the outrages which the English had committed against her flag, while she was fighting the battles of England, and indignant at the horrible attack on Copenhagen, made common cause with France.

France then entertained the hope that England would have been sensible of the inutility of protracting the war, and that she would have been willing to listen to reasonable terms of peace. But this hope vanished very soon. At the same time that they vanished, the English, as if the expedition to Copenhagen had deprived them of all sense of shame, and set them free from all restraint, disclosed their projects, and published their orders of council of Nov. 1807. An arbitrary and tyrannical act, which filled all Europe with indignation. By this act England took upon her to make regulations obliging foreign vessels to come to her harbors before they proceeded to their ultimate destinations, and to pay her tribute. Thus she rendered herself mistress of the navigation of the whole world; recognized no maritime nation as independent, rendered all nations tributaries, subjected them to her laws, allowed them no liberty of trade, unless with a direct profit to herself, fixed the foundation of her revenues upon the industry of other nations, and the produce of her territories, and declared herself sovereign of the ocean, of which she disposed as any government would do of the rivers in the interior of its dominions.

Adverting to this plan of legislation, which was nothing else than the public assertion of universal sovereignty, a measure extending the jurisdiction of the English parliament over the whole of the globe, the emperor found himself under the necessity of making an extreme part, and of employing every means of opposition in his power rather than suffer the world to bend under the yoke which the English endeavored to impose on it. He published the Milan decree, declaring all vessels denationalized, which had paid the tribute imposed by the English. The Americans, threatened with a second subjugation by the English, and with the loss of their independence so gloriously acquired, put a general embargo on all their vessels, and renounced all navigation and commerce—thus making a sacrifice of the interests of the moment to that which is her perpetual interest—the preservation of her independence.

The success of these measures depended more upon their execution in Holland than in any other country. Holland, on the contrary, was an obstacle to their execution. The Dutch still continued to carry on a commercial intercourse with the English. All the representations of France upon this subject were entirely useless. His imperial majesty was obliged to have recourse to measures of rigor, which proved how much he was displeased. Twice were the French custom-houses shut to the commerce of Holland. They are so at this moment, so that the Dutch have no legal communication with the nations of the continent; and the emperor determined not to open these barriers while circumstances remained unchanged. In effect it would have been to open them to the English commerce. The Dutch nation, far from imitating the patriotism of the Americans, have been guided in all their transactions solely by miserable mercantile considerations.

On the other hand the emperor observed, that Holland is destitute of the means for carrying on war, and almost without resources for her own defence. She is without marine, she is without arms, she is without money, she is without energy. During the last expedition of the English, the important position of Vercy, which was not then provisioned nor armed, made no resistance; and the important post of Batavia, upon which might have depended the success of so many events, was abandoned six hours after the appearance of the advanced guard of the enemy. Without army, without revenues, it might also be said without friends and without allies, the Dutch are a society animated only by a regard to their commercial interests, and forming a rich, useful and respectable company, but not a nation.

His majesty desires peace with England. He took steps at Tilsit with a view to this object, but they were without result. Those which he concerted at Erfurt, with his ally the emperor of Russia, have had no better success. The war will, therefore, be long, since all the steps taken to arrive at peace, have been useless. The proposition even of sending ministers to Mortain to treat for the exchange of prisoners, although called for by England, remains without effect, because it was feared it might lead to a reconciliation. England, in arrogating by her orders of Nov. 1807, an universal sovereignty, and in adopting the principles of perpetual war, has broken every thing, rendered legitimate every means of repelling her pretensions. If therefore the change which has lately taken place in the English ministry produces none in the principles of England, which it will be easy to discover from their speeches in the new parliament; and if she continues to proclaim the principle of perpetual war and of universal sovereignty, in maintaining her orders of council, in that case the undersigned is charged to declare to the Dutch minister and nation, that the present situation of Holland is incompatible with the circumstances or the situation in which the new principles adopted by England have placed the affairs of the empire and the continent. In consequence his imperial majesty proposes—

I. To recall home the prince of his blood whom he had placed on the throne of Holland. The first duty of a French prince placed in the line of hereditary succession to the imperial throne is towards that throne. When in opposition to that, all others must give way; the first duty of every Frenchman in whatever situation destiny may place him, is towards his country.

II. To occupy all the mouths of the rivers in Holland, and all its ports by French troops, as they were from the conquest made by France in 1794, to the moment when his imperial majesty hoped to conciliate every one by establishing the throne of Holland.

III. To employ every means, and without being stopped by any consideration to make Holland enter into the continental system, and to wrest definitely its ports and coasts from the administration which has rendered the ports of Holland the principal entrepôts, and the great part of the Dutch merchants, the brokers, and the commercial agents of England.

"DUC DE CADORE.

"PARIS, Jan. 24, 1820.

From the Boston Palladium, April 10.

Important Official Article.

The Paris Monitor, the government paper, contains long comments on the late speech of the king of England. From these comments we extract the following as interesting to Americans.

Speech.—His majesty has received the strongest assurances from the American minister resident at this court, that the U. States are desirous of maintaining friendly relations between the two countries. The desire will be met by a corresponding disposition on the part of his majesty.

Monitor.—We scarcely know which to admire most, the pusillanimity of England towards Sweden, her irony towards Spain, or her conduct towards the U. S. The latter have just rejected your Jackson—Jackson, who ever bears written in his face the name of Copenhagen, and who is so stigmatized, that every relation with him can only produce dishonor! They have laid an embargo on your vessels; they have been deaf to your intrigues, and you have become humble allies, and mild! You consider yourselves happy that the United States have not determined to make war upon you. Whence this language! men ask one another with astonishment.—It shows a pusillanimity highly worthy of the rest of the speech. There is nothing to gain by war with America, and with you every thing is done for gold. Men only fight for gain, and it is only for gold you shed your blood. Thinking men see on the banners of your troops in lieu of the rays of your suns, these symbols of non-liturgical charity, blood, sugar, oil, and of coffee. It is for these you fight.—You utter menace would reap no profit from a war with the U. States, and from that moment you are dead to every insult!

Speech.—Whatever temporary and partial inconveniences may have resulted from the measures which were directed by France against those great sources of our prosperity and strength, those measures have wholly failed of producing any permanent or general effect.

Monitor.—You acknowledge that the measures directed by France against the main sources of your prosperity have produced some effect, but only a temporary effect. We shall point out the reason why that effect has only been momentary, and indicate the remedy. The affairs of Spain have opened to you many ports of that kingdom; they shall be shut against you. Trieste was for you a place of immense trade; it is now forever shut against you.—Holland above all obstructed the result of measures, which derive their force from the uniformity of execution; she has betrayed the common cause; she has received your goods under an American flag, disowned by the United States themselves, or any other cloak, but she shall not receive them any longer! Your orders in council of 1807, render it necessary that the coast and ports of Holland be occupied by French troops, and that shall be done. And as one of the results of the first and second coalition was the extension of the coast of France to the Scheldt, the result of your orders in council of 1807 will be this, to extend the coast of France to the Elbe.—The inconveniences which you have hitherto experienced in a momentary manner, you shall henceforth constantly experience, and in a manner more severe.—It must be confessed that the exertions required by the continental war, have caused many springs to be relaxed. The peace of the continent secured by the union of two great empires, and the adhesion of Prussia, Denmark, Sweden and Austria to the same system, will impart fresh vigor to all the measures and deprive you of every means to trade with Europe.

DOCTOR B. FENDALL,

Regular bred Surgeon Dentist.

AND who has been in practice for near THIRTY YEARS, has just arrived in Alexandria, and may be seen and consulted at Brook's tavern, at any time during his continuance in it. The earlier applications are made to the Doctor by those who feel disposed to employ him as a Dentist, the better, as his continuance in Alexandria is very uncertain. Those ladies and gentlemen, in Alexandria, who find it inconvenient to wait on the Doctor, he will readily attend, on the shortest notice.

Dr. Fendall cures the scurvy in the gums, be it ever so inveterate, in a short time, twenty four hours at farthest; fastens loose teeth by making the gums grow up to them, renders the teeth white and beautiful; prevents their decay; keeps such as are so from becoming worse, even to old age; fills up those that are hollow with gold, with foil or lead which will not only render them useful, but prevent their aching and further decay; extracts teeth and stumps with ease; makes and fixes artificial teeth. His Columbian Antiseptic Dentifrice, for preserving the teeth, gums, sockets, &c. and superior he thinks, both in elegance and efficacy to any other, is still sold by the doctor.

There is machinery of every description for conveying the wheat from the wagon and from the packing with a very small portion of manual labor. WEDNESDAY, APRIL 18.

Mr. Snowden.

At the election held yesterday, for members to represent the county of Fairfax in the next legislature, the poll closed as follows:

For Richard Coleman, 126	} Federalists.
Richard M. Scott, 123
Dr. Peake, 126	} Democrats.
George Minor, 123

Of course Messrs Coleman and Peake are elected. The Federalists in the neighborhood of the Court House, and those who attended the election, exerted themselves with a zeal worthy the cause they espoused—which did them great honor.—But many federal gentlemen in different parts of the county—men too, who have much at stake, and are constantly in the habit of complaining of the prevalence of democracy, did not even attend the election, which would have resulted decidedly in favor of the Federal Candidates if they had—while, on the other hand, the Democrats came forward almost to a man—with their usual industry.

A BY-STANDER.

April 17, 1810.

Extracts of letters from Hamburgh, dated January 26.

"The Danish chancery took the papers of vessels indiscriminately; have examined them, and have ordered the sequestration to be taken off: the cargoes to be set at the disposal of the proprietors. They have named commissioners in Altona, Tonnin-gen, Frederickstadt and Husum, and have instructed them to examine the papers appertaining to American property in those places; and if they find them in order to release the property immediately. There is no doubt but that the Russian and Danish governments are well disposed to wards us, and will do what depends on them to encourage and favor the American trade with them. But they are ruled by a higher power."

February 1.

"I have nothing particularly new to communicate excepting that the Danish government are clearing most of the vessels under sequestration."

From Lisbon.—A respectable gentleman of this city, who arrived yesterday by the eastern stage, has politely obliged us with the following information:

State of Portugal on the 16th of February, 1810, the time we left the Tagus, in the brig Rambler of Bristol, R. Island.

The head quarters of the British army was at Coimbra.

The French with an army of 30,000 foot and 8000 cavalry were at Badajoz, against whom a detachment of 70,000 men, chiefly Portuguese, were marching and had advanced as far as Alcantara.

A few days before we left Portugal a reinforcement of 2000 Highlanders had arrived from England, some of whom together with 1700 Portuguese were sent to Cadiz, near which place, it was reported at Lisbon, the French were in great numbers, and it was expected that the attack on Lisbon would be made from that quarter. That a grand council of war had been held at Lisbon, at which were present, Lord Wellington and Marshall Beresford, the result of their determination was not known, but it was generally believed that the British troops would in a short time be withdrawn from Portugal, upon a supposition that better terms might be obtained for that country than could be expected should the French enter by force.—That preparatory to this the heavy baggage was embarked at the time we left the Tagus.—That there were 300 transports in that river waiting for the troops, and it was supposed all the horses would be shot as there was no shipping calculated for their reception.

[N. T. Com. Adv.]

PHILADELPHIA, April 14.

We stop the press to give the following intelligence, received by the Anthony Manna, arrived at this port yesterday from Cadiz.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in Cadiz, to another in Philadelphia, dated Cadiz, 19th Feb. 1810.

"We have now here 4500 English troops, and look hourly for 3000 more, which we know have embarked at Lisbon for this port, as also 2000 troops from Gibraltar.—With these and the ships of war, Cadiz will defy all the power that Bonaparte can bring against it."

[We also state from an authentic source, that Romana was following up the invaders of Andalusia, and at the last accounts, was on the point of cutting off the junction between two of their grand divisions. It was supposed the whole corps of 50,000, with Joz at their head, would soon be Buagoynd.]

Congress of the United States.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MONDAY, April 16.

[CONCLUDED.]

[Taken for the Alexandria Gazette.]

The question on Mr. Macon's motion was taken and lost.

A motion was made to modify the resolution so as to take the questions on the reduction of the army and navy separately.

This motion prevailed.

The question to reduce the army was taken and carried by a large majority, 77 rising in the affirmative. The question to reduce the navy was also carried, 67 in the affirmative. The resolution was therefore passed.

The committee then rose and reported the resolution. The house proceeded to consider; but before any question was taken an adjournment was called for and carried.

TUESDAY, April 17.

Mr. Smilie moved a resolution to rescind the resolution passed by both houses to adjourn Congress on the 23d instant.

Mr. Gholson moved to amend the resolution so as to authorize the adjournment on the first of May. After some desultory debate the resolution with the amendment was laid on the table.

YAZOO PETITION!

Mr. Randolph moved a resolution to reject the petition of the Yazoo claimants, presented to this house some time since.—

The question for the consideration of this resolution was taken by ayes and noes and lost—Ayes 46, noes 54.

Mr. Randolph then moved that the petitioners have leave to withdraw their petition.

A long debate took place, which lasted until two o'clock; when Mr. Gholson moved to lay the subject on the table. This motion prevailed.

A communication from the Secretary of the Treasury was received, covering a statement of the receipts and expenditures at the Treasury. This statement was made agreeably to Mr. Randolph's resolution, passed some days since. Referred to the committee of the whole to whom was referred the bill laying additional duties on goods, wares and merchandize, imported into the U. S.

A bill from the Senate, for the establishment of a quarter master's department, was read twice and referred to a committee of the whole for to-morrow.

The bill to amend the Alexandria turnpike act was returned from the senate with an amendment. The house concurred with the senate, and passed the bill as amended.

The Batture Bill was returned from the senate with amendments.

DIED yesterday morning suddenly Mr. Wm. F. HALL, merchant of this place.

His friends and acquaintance are desired to attend his funeral this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Two Hundred Dollars Reward.

Run away from the subscriber, living at Albon, King George county, Virginia, on the 23d ultimo.

A BRIGHT mulatto man, named GRIF-
FLIN, sometimes calls himself GARYIN DARLING, about 25 years of age, 5 feet 6 or 8 inches high, well, though not very stout made, a very light mulatto, gray eyes, dark hair and whiskers neatly cut, being an excellent barber and accustomed as a waiter all his life, when spoken to abruptly is much addicted to stuttering—had on when he eloped, a blue round jacket with red cape and pantaloons of cloth, Suwarrow boots, white hat, and black handkerchief about his neck—it is probable he will change his dress as he has a variety of good clothing with him. Having gone off without any provocation, I have some reason to believe, this fellow is making his way to Baltimore or Philadelphia, with an expectation of imposing himself as a freeman. If he is secured in jail so that I get him again, out of the state of Virginia or Maryland, or the district of Columbia, I will give Two Hundred Dollars; if otherwise secured so that I get him again, One Hundred Dollars.

Masters of vessels and others, are cautioned against harboring or carrying off the said fellow, at their peril.

A Horse-stealer.

A travelling man with four or five horses for sale, (which were driven by a mulatto man rather elderly looking, and a short round made fellow) sold a chunky made black poney for forty four dollars, during a rainy ride from the falls bridge to the red house tavern, in Fairfax county, on the 19th March, to Aaron Miller, of said county; which horse had been some days before taken from a waggon at Cameron, but was pursued and recovered from the thief who deluded the warrant and got off. He said his name was Oden Johnson, from Elk Run, appeared to be about 25 years of age, well looking, with very red hair and whiskers and was well dressed; he said he had been selling horses in George Town and was going to Leesburg—he had a mule and two white matched grey horses in the drove. He also sold or exchanged a loose thick overcoat, which appears since to have been taken from Crawford's tavern shortly before the 19th. If any person can discover or trace either of the above named dealers, thereby leading to an exposure of them, by calling on or by writing to Mr. Snowden, the Printer of the Alexandria paper, shall receive Ten Dollars reward therefor—He took the Centreville road from Wren's tavern.
